ITALIAN STOLE MAMMOTH ORE

Cleverly Captured.

RETURNED NEARLY $1,500.

Foreigner Related Story of a Hidden Ledge in Deep Creek-Some Rather Funny Features.

The Mammoth Mining Co. is indebted to Joe Raleigh, the well known detective, for a clever piece of work executed during the past few days. At any rate, on account of Raleigh, the company has recovered $1,457.35, which s man named Peter Bergen, who had been doing some leasing in the mine, had received from the sale of some stolen ore taken from a rich streak between the 1,000 and 1,100 levels of the mine. It appears that the fellow escaped the espionage of the officers of the company by carrying the "fat" ore to the surface in the pockets of a canvass coat and in his dinner bucket.

The ore was sampled at the Taylor & Brunton works in this city, which concern paid Bergen $1,825 for the product he had brought in, all within the past three months. He made three shipments in all; the first carried gold values of 217 ounces; the next, 24 ounces, and the last, which came in last week, Bergen is an Italian, and when he brought the ore to the sampler, naturally it aroused suspicion. Supt. Copeland questioned the fellow, and he made the apparently satisfactory explanation that the product came from the Deep Creeck region. He declared, in his broken English, that he was keeping the location a scoret, and being an unnaturalized citizen, he could not locate the ground.

At this stage of the proceedings the Italian took Manager Copeland into his Italian took Manager Copeland into his confidences, and it was proposed, so it is said, that he (Copeland) was to lo-cate the ground in his name and in re-turn he was to get a certain interest for doing this and for getting the tip. Dick Winder, an employe of the sampler, got wind of the Italian's mine and he, too, so the story goes, wanted an interest; but an amical division could not be effected, so with his meager description of the vicinity of the place described by the wiley son of Italy as being the spot from whence the shining gold came from, he gave up his position over all and a syndicate and set out. gold came from, he gave up his posi-tion, organized a syndicate and set out to find the bonanza, which he firmly believed he could do. In the meantime the Italian was dined very elegantly at the expense of the sampler elegantly at the expense of the sampler manager, who also had been taken into the deal, his employers.

But the "syndicate" decided to do some detective work, so here is where Raleigh was brought in. When Bergen came to town last, he was advised that he was being watched, so he remained under cover. When he came out he was still in the area of the detective and was still in the eye of the detective and was followed to Provo with a man residing in Payson, who, it seems, was employed to haul the ore to Salt Lake. Raleigh and some others of the syndi-cate went on to Payson, but the driver was sworn to secrecy and refused to disclose anything. It began to dawn upon those in persuit that the rich ore was stolen from some Tintic mine, so was stolen from some Tintic mine, so Raleigh, having the name or the Ital-Raleigh, having the hand towards lan in his possession, headed towards that camp. He was brought to the surface and "sweated," but refused to talk. In the meantime Bergen's wife was found and she gave the snap away. Later, upon the assurance from Manager McIntyre that the Mammoth company would not prosecute Bergen, the sum mentioned was produced. Bergen had stored the ore away in his home and it was from there that it was forwarded to the there that it was forwarded to the Manager Copeland, went out to Tintic last night to identify the Italian. A number of Salt Lakers who got an inkling of the "rich find" are now scouring the desert in search of the "hidden ledge." Only last Tuesday a party of several left than party of several left the city for this very purpose.

How a Leaser in the Mine Was Worked by So-called "Fiscal Car of Iron Ore Shipped Out of Agents" in the East.

Chicago Concern Wanten to Mulct Him Out of $5,000 - Scheme of Pennsylvania Individual.

The owners of meritorious mining propositions should beware of the socalled "fiscal" agents who are using a great amount of printer's ink in unscrupulous publications in various parts of the country at the present time. There are perhaps hundreds of concerns of this kind operating in the for more men. larger cities of the east. The graft is worked in various forms; The graft is worked in various forms; and here is one of them. Not very long ago a gentleman, interested in a very promising mining property in one of the southern camps of the state, opened up correspondence with one of these concerns claiming to have its head-quarters in Chicago. The owner of the property was unable to raise sufficient money to carry on development work and he was attracted by a catchy adnd he was attracted by a catchy adand he was attracted by a catchy ac-vertisement in an eastern journal which happened to come to his notice. After the exchange of several letters, the owner sent on his reports; the "fis-cal" agents gave the assurance that the proposition could be financed with out any difficulty. The gentleman then proceeded on to Chicago, called upon the firm, which was located in a luxuri-ously furnished apartment in one of the principal office buildings, expecting to close up an arrangement for the handing of the stock. The gentleman went armed with a pocket full of evidence that the property was all that was claimed for it and he had other ex-hibits with him sufficient to satisfy any sane person that as the chief in-terested party in the enterprise he was honest and had some standing in the community. But the gentleman was fresh from the hills and he was at once sized up as being "a good thing." The firm politely informed the Utahn that before the case could be considered a cash deposit of $5,000 would be required and in addition a commission of 331-3 per cent on all sales would be exacted.

The miner concluded that the proposition submitted to him was a little on submitted to him was a little on submitted to him was a little on the ensuing year: H. H. H. H. H. He con-cluded that if he had possessed this sum of money he could have applied it to a better purpose in working this it to a better purpose in working this mine. Before leaving, however, he was told by the chief spokesman that hardly a day passed that they didn't catch some kind of a victim, and that the firm didn't have any time to waste on anything where a "graft" could not be worked. This very firm has disposed of stocks, and plenty of them, generally among the working classes of people, who never stop to look up the standing of the persons doing the

The excuse is that it usually requires the expenditure of at least this much money before a stock becomes well enough known to become salable and always states that the advance will be returned out of the first commissions earned. He seldom forgets to ask if the company having the stock to dispose of will issue him a block "for his own use" and accept his notes for it, reserving the privilege of "being allowed to renew or pay the same at maturity." Nevertheless, he has captured his share of victims.

Prof. W. H. Tibbals, some days ago, received a unique request from a would-be client in the east. Without paying a cent of money down for a certain well known stock the party asked that 100 shares be purchased at a stipulated price and held for his credit and when it rose to a certain higher figure, to sell it, deduct the commissions and remit the balance. The professor never heard of the party making the request, consequently, rejected the order.

Such Were the Conditions on Stock Exchange Today.

The mining stock market underwent another spell of inactivity this forenoon. During the regular call 15,565 shares were transferred, which brought $7,812.75. On the open board 3,300 trials added an even $1,000 more to the totals. The first trader of the call was Con. Mercur, 200 shares going at $1.25. Daly-Judge found buyers to the extent of 215 shares at $10.25. Lower Mammoth opened weak, closing with $1.311/2 bid. May Day registered another drop and closed with 22 cents bid. Star Con. was also onhe toboggan list, beginning at 30 cents, it fell a half cent per share. Uncle Sam was offered at 27 cents, which was taken. Another bunch was taken at 26 cents. The stock stiffened three-quarters of a cent before the hammer dropped. New York held its own very well under the weight of the
